ENGLAND REFUSES RIGHT TO SEARCH SHIPS FOR LIQUOR

Decline Hughes' Request Reciprocal Agreement To Extend Prohibition Jurisdiction Outside Three Mile Limit

ASSURE AMERICA PRECAUTION AGAINST RUM SMUGGLERS

By Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 16.—Great Britain, in a communication today to the State Department, is understood to have decined to agree to Secretary of State Hughes' suggestion for a reciprocal agreement for the extension of the right of search and seizure so as to give American prohibition officials jurisdiction outside the three mile limit.

At the same time, the British government assured the American government every precaution would be taken to prevent violation of the American prohibition law by rum smugglers under the British flag.

S. S. CONFERENCE HELD HERE TONIGHT

All Denominations Invited To Meeting—Many Attend Session At Pineville Yesterday.

A Sunday School Conference will be held at the Presbyterian church at 7:30 o'clock tonight, conducted by the Rev. George A. Joplin, general secretary of the Kentucky Sunday School association. All denominations are urged to attend the conference which is for all persons interested in Sunday school work.

This conference is, in main, a continuation of the Sunday School convention held in Pineville Saturday and Sunday. A number of Middlesboro people attended the sessions of this convention and T. R. Hill of Middlesboro made a splendid address at the meeting yesterday afternoon.

Among those from Middlesboro who went to the meeting in Pineville yesterday afternoon were: Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McCamy, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Allen, C. A. Blackburn, A. D. Campbell, Joe Campbell, M. F. Gamble, T. R. Hill, Gladys Gray, Alice Motch and Blanche Hurst.

Start Collecting City Taxes

The time for collecting city taxes begins next week and extends until November 10. The taxes may be paid at the clerk's office of the city hall.

WOMENS CLUBS OF DISTRICT COMING

All Day Convention Here Next Monday—State Officers To Be Here

The annual Eleventh District meeting of the Kentucky Federation at Women's Clubs will convene in Middlesboro next Monday, October 23. At this time state officers and district officers of the Federation will be the city's guests and take part in the all-day meeting to be held at the Booneway Inn at that time.

The following in regard to the meeting is from a letter written by the district president, Mrs. Nettie Cover Worsham of Corbin, to the Middlesboro president, Mrs. D. G. Hinks:

"You doubtless know that this is the year in your district for the election of your vice governor and recording secretary so it is necessary that you give the matter wide publicity among your club members, urging that every possible member attend the meeting the very best of any of the districts?

"Last year the governors brought in the following resolution and the board heartily endorsed it. That the luncheon be simple; prepared if possible, by other than the club woman, so that they need not miss any of the session, and that each delegate pay for her own meal. If the Club or Club women individually care to invite guests they have the privilege of paying for that one or more. But by all means let us women be democratic and pay our ow nway. Our presence proving an inspiration for greater federation work and not a burden to the Hostess Club."

Local Hunters Catch Ten Live Possums In All Night Hunt

Ten live possums, aggregating in weight 50 pounds, was the spoils brought in by a quartet of successful hunters yesterday morning after an all night hunt. To prove their story, the possums are now on display at JJ. M. Rogan's home.

The hunters, J. M. Rogan, George E. Day, Dr. Schultz Gibson and W. E. Frazer, started out Saturday evening with Mr. Rogan's two recently acquired fine coon hounds. These dogs are credited with being the best in Alabama, and this accomplishment tends to prove that claim. The men were joined at Ewing by Tyler Caldwell and his dogs, and the possums were all caught in a woods near Ewing.

The men say there is so many possums that they got tired of catching them and quit, coming back Saturday night instead of Sunday as they had planned to do. They have not announced what they will do with the possums, some of which are rather small.

EVANGELIST HAS SPLENDID SERMON

Rev. Clark Preaches Last Night On "Prepare To Meet Thy God," at Christian Church.

"We will not all meet the same God at judgment day. We will each meet our own distinctive God, the God we made for ourselves in this world. To that degree that we have violated the laws of God and have made no provision to repent therefor we will have a different God."

That was part of the explanation of the Bible's greatest exhortation, "Prepare To Meet Thy God," told in a most masterful way by the Rev. W. J. Clark, now conducting a series of revival services at the First Christian church.

In dealing with exhortation, Rev. Clark said he would tell what each word meant, taking the last word, God, first.

Rev. Clark said no argument was needed to prove that God is, for "only the fool hath said in his heart," (there is no God." God is creator, lawyer and father.

"Meet," was the next word. "Some day you will stand before God and you will have no advocate," he said, "you will stand before the bar where standards are perfect and where your life record here below will be the only record to plead for you. There will be no advocate but Jesus Christ himself.

The first word in the exhortation is "prepare." This means we must get ready, says Rev. Clarke. "We have condemned ourselves and we must set about to right ourselves. Many are planning to get ready but are mistaken in the idea that they can get ready in their own way, but that is wrong. To get ready to stand before God we must get ready in the way God wants us to get ready before we will be made good enough to meet God.

"The King's Life Insurance Co.," will be Rev. Clarke's subject for tonight's sermon.

SISTER OF R. L. BROWN DIE SATURDAY IN VIRGINIA

R. L. Brown received word Saturday night that his sister, Mrs. Ella Coldiron of Norton Va., was dead. The message did not come unexpectedly as she had been ill about a month. Mr. and Mrs. Brown left today for Norton accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Brown. The funeral will be held at Jonesville. During the past few years. Mrs. Coldiron has been a resident of Pennington Gap and Jonesville.

Parent-Teachers' Meeting Tonight

The Parent-Teachers Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the school building at 7:30 o'clock this evening. A program has been prepared for the evening. All members are urged to attend and bring with them any school ideas which may be of value.

Says Four-Hour Work-Day Enough And 300 Such Days Make Year

By Dudley Siddall

Schnectady, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Four hours' work a day. Two hundred working days a year.

Some time, when the human race learns how to live, these 800 annual hours of work will be sufficient to maintain any man and his family on a high scale of living.

This prediction is made by Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, one of the world's foremost electrical engineers.

"To bring this about," said he, "all that is necessary is to eliminate any waste.

"You encounter waste everywhere. Two similar stores on opposite corners, each making a little profit, where just one store would make much profit. Large sales organizations, putting in long hours developing artificial needs. Factories working nights to supply things that must be sold instead of bought. Shipyards turning out battleships whose only purpose is destruction. Waste and duplication of egort all around us.

"Most of these wastes can be done away with. And then four hours a day, 200 days a year, will be all the work that any man need do."

Dr. Steinmetz came to America 33 years ago, a penniless immigrant. In that time he has risen to a place of first rank in one of the nation's biggest industries. He is 57 years old.

He insists that he works only an hour a day.

"By that," he ays, "I mean that I spend only an hour a day on correspondence and other drudgery. The rest of the time I am an electrical engineer."

He doesn't even know what his pay is. He lives in a beautiful home in Schnectady's finest residential district and has a camp about five miles from town. At the house he has a laboratory, as well as at the mammoth plant of the General Electric Company.

The company gives him what money he asks for—perhaps $100,000 a year, perhaps more or less. Most of it he spends in his work.

By no mean is Dr. Steinmetz a recluse. He takes an active hand in local politics. He speaks at churches and other local meetings. The townspeople—barring the type of citizen whose hair bristles at the mention of the word Socialist—not only like him, but love him.

CITY PRISONER ATTEMPTS ESCAPE THIS MORNING

Clarence Hayes, a city prisoner being employed cleaning the streets, attempted to run away while at work this morning on Cumberland avenue. He was caught before he could get away, however, and the process of capturing him, during which several shots were fired, caused quite a commotion down town. Hayes, who is in jail on conviction of carrying a concealed deadly weapon, got a little ways from the guard and undertook to run away. He was brought back, a chain was put on him and he was set to work again.

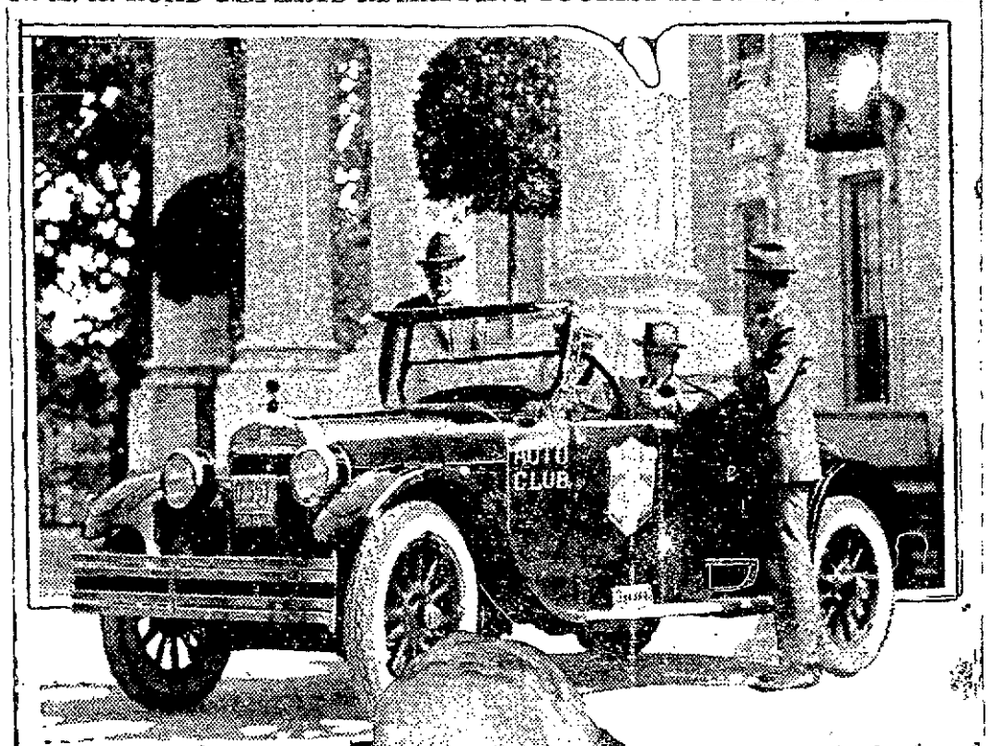
Davis Baby Dies.

Harry C. Davis, three-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis of Binghamtown, died yesterday and was buried this afternoon in the Colson cemetery.

Fire On Prospect Hill

A fire yesterday at noon did about $1000 damage to a house on Prospect Hill in which E. R. Perry lived. The fire department was called and put the fire out. The house belonged to John Pridemore. Insurance covered the loss on the furniture but the owner had none on the building. The fire is believed to have caught from the kitchen stove.

N. M. A. ROAD EXPERTS REMAPPING TOURIST ROUTES TO FLORIDA



President Harding and official N. M. A. logging car, which he sped on its Florida tour.

Remapping of all principal routes leading to Florida will follow a tour now being made by an official car of the National Motorists' Association, in the interest of hundreds of affiliated automobile clubs throughout the country.

The logging party was received by President Harding, who commended the association's initiative in gathering and compiling valuable information for motorists of the country on such an extensive scale.

The President remarked the party that he is still a member of the Marion County Automobile club, and therefore interested in the work of the Ohio State Automobile association and the National Motorists' association, of which he also is a member through the affiliation of the Marion county club.

The car is manned by D. B. Scott and George E. Young, map and road experts in the N. M. A. touring division. Their trip will cover 3,000 miles and leads through Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida. When the logging of these roads has been completed the N. M. A. will be prepared to lay before tourists the most accurate and up-to-date details on routes to Florida from any section of the country.

The more western connections to Florida via Dixie Highway and other routes are being investigated by Pathfinder Allen who is now preparing tour cards for the N. M. A. Touring Division.

"At present a number of roads are being recommended by the various touring agencies and organizations," is the statement of Secretary Fred H. Caley, "but there has been no check made recently and much of the information is inaccurate because of the large amount of new road construction. We know that many changes are necessary in routes and the official N. M. A. cars will be kept at work as long as necessary to do a thorough job."

Disorderly Preacher And Mistreated German Bride in Court Saturday

Two minor cases in magistrate's court Saturday were important merely from the standpoint of human interest. The first of these was against the Rev. H. Pickett, colored for breach of peace. The Rev. Pickett was former pastor of the Thankful Baptist church here, but is now manager of the Union Hotel. He left the Thankful Church, their creditor, and one night last week he went back to collect the amount at a deacon's meeting. Hard words ensued between the Rev. Pickett and one of the deacons, and both men seem to have lost their tempers. Pickett is said to have threatened to strike the deacon with his cane and upon proof of this he was fined $10 and costs.

The other case was against Ed. Carter, accused of striking his wife. The wife, a German girl whom Carter hd brought back with him from overseas after the war, could not speak a word of English and William Wallbrecht acted as interpreter for her. Carter was admonished to be kinder to his wife and the two were sent home together.

OFFERS REWARD FOR RETURN OF FUGITIVES

A reward of $250 has been offered by the governor for the return of either of the life prisoners, Chester and Bob Bowling, who escaped from the city jail here last Thursday morning. No trace of either of these men, or of Clark Gunter who escaped with them, has been found. Circulars have been sent all over the country and officers have searched diligently for them, but so far without avail. Chief Ball said this morning that the fugitives were probably hiding in the woods somewhere and it was a difficult problem to trace them.

AMERICAN LEGION CONVENES TODAY IN MEW ORLEANS

Commander MacNider Says Disabled Service Man First Responsibility —Says Compensation Fight Just Begun.

BELIEVES REPRESENTATIVES ARE BEHIND THE SOLDIERS

By Associated Press

New Orleans, Oct. 16.—Declaration that the American Legion was regarding the interest of the disabled service man as its first responsibility and "that with regard to the adjusted compensation act, we're just started to fight," were the outstanding points in the address of Hanford MacNider, national Commander, delivered before the Fourth Annual Convention of the Legion at its opening session here today.

"Adjusted compensation legislation is right. We know it and we regret that there prevails in America," MacNider said, "great well-financed attack by interests which we cannot help but feel are sordid and selfish. They have given us one little setback but those who represent the people in Washington, are with us by great majorities and no one can stand between the wishes of the American people and the fulfillment of what they believe to be their just obligation."

A THOUGHT

By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.—Hebrews 11:8.

Keep not standing, fixed and rooted
Briskly venture, briskly roam;
Head and hand, wher'er thou foot it,
And stout heart are still at home.
In what land the sun does visit,
Brisk are we whate'er betide
To give space for wandering is it
That the world was made so wide.
—Goethe.

REGARDING THE EAST END STREETS

There are people who will always drag out the family skeleton after it is safely stowed away and attention is diverted from it, and such people are universally condemned. Now there is no doubt but that the East End streets are Middlesboro's family skeleton—or one of them, but we are taking the stand that anything with such prominent and plentiful bumps as East Cumberland avenue has, can not be considered well stowed away. So we reserve the right to talk about the matter

All summer long East End street question was debated, learnedly and heatedly, from every angle Finally, an ordinance was passed providing for its reconstruction, then after a conference with the State Highway Commission, it was reported that this body would pay one third of the cost of reconstruction and that it would scarify the street to make it passable this fall and winter as th commission advised waiting till spring to begin construction work. Contentedly, then the city council voted to wash its hands of the matter and await results.

But now we are faced with another problem. Road engineers, after investigating conditions, report that the expense and consequent results of scarifying this street render the plan impractical, and they advise that the state stay out of the affair until next spring when it is time to start work on the construction proper. At the same time they recommend that the city council coal patch the street or fill the holes with slag to provide for winter travel

East Cumberland avenue and Fitzpatrick avenue, the streets in question are in a deplorable condition and seem to be getting worse all of the time The state has practically renounced them for the present, the city council has formally voted to have nothing to do with them, and so they stand. Won't the city reconsider or some influential citizen use his influence with state or county, and see if these streets cannot be improved for traffic in the next five or six months before the work on the new street begins?

WANTED: SALESMEN

A shortage of sales managers is reported by a white collar employment bureau in New York city, which supplies business executives, efficiency experts and college professors just as similar organizations supply teamsters cooks and day laborers.

There is a constant and increasing demand for sales managers, says the report. Recently we have been supplying men for these positions at salaries averaging $231 a week. And we have trouble finding enough men to meet the demand.

Young men, undecided what to do, give a thought to salesmanship as a career.

And, by the way, the young bookkeeper who is struggling along and sees no future in his line should be heartened by the news that plenty of jobs paying $15 000 to $0.000 a year with the superbookkeepers known as auditors.

The business of our country went through an era in which the big fortunes went to men who were geniuses at production. The corporations now known as trusts were built up as producing organizations.

High efficiency in production, however, means nothing if there is no market for what is produced. This is where the salesman steps in.

The sales engineer now ranks in importance with the production engineer

Salesmanship is the coming field for competition is bound to be sharp and keen in the post war years that lie ahead And it is salesmanship that tops the business in high competition.

Traveling on trains you meet many crackerjack salesmen, veterans, grown old and white haired in the service.

But salesmanship is primarily a young man's game The vigor, determination never lagging energy and enthusiasm of the genuine go getter are qualities of youth

Youth will go after the orders, sell the goods.

Middle age and old age with the wisdom and judgment and foresight of maturity, will stay at home and produce the things to fill the orders.

It is generally realized that the problems of production have been nearly solved, and that the real problem of business is distribution Making distribution more scientific and less wasteful, by finding economical shortcuts from producer to consumer is a job that is up alo the sales engineers and their armies of salesmen

Majority of our economic problems are sales problems—problems of marketing.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM

MIDDLE-AGED PEOPLE

By Berton Braley

"MIDDLE-AGED PEOPLE" Youth greets them with jeers,
And scout at the wisdom that goes with their years;
And therefore, while Youth is alert and athrob
And gets into trouble and then is pulled out
By middle-aged people who long ago learned
The use of the caution that youngsters have spurned.

"MIDDLE-AGED PEOPLE," they're stodgy and tame,
But somehow or other they're wise to the game
And though Youth imagines it's running the show,
The middle-aged people are making it go
Bereft of illusions, experienced, wise,
The middle-aged people have pretty good eyes

"MIDDLE-AGED PEOPLE," they're lacking in pep.
They look 'ere they leap, and they watch every step,
And Youth says they're slow, and I reckon they are
But speed without thought doesn't get very far,
And therefore, while Youth is alert and athrob
It's middle-aged people who dope out the job'

"MIDDLE-AGED PEOPLE"—they often hold back.
They don't like new paths, they prefer the old track,
And Youth frets and rages at order and rule,
While middle-aged people just smile and keep cool,
For, spite of the talk that the youngsters have hurled,
The middle-aged people are running the world

Levity

The next thing on the program apparently will be the decline of the American mercantile marine in its passenger ship end.

Thirsty traffic will be willing to go to Canadian ports to sail on liquor serving foreign ships. Or the foreign liners will enter our ports and take on their saloon supplies after they pass the three mile limit, transferred from other ships.

However, this may be in keeping with our modern mercantile marine policy, as it might enable Washington to sell our passenger liners at 50 cuts apiece.

Important

What is important, worth noticing of the many angles of the European situation? Well here's one that stands out pretty strongly—in fact, indelibly

The French government has not yet ratified the program of the Washington naval disarmament conference. This is the key to the European situation, if there is any key. An American can understand the French claim that they need a big army to protect them against Germany. But, for that purpose, she does not need a supernavy, especially submarines.

Is Napoleon's ghost rising?

Mightier

We aren't quite as peaceful as we imagine. A government report says that about 13,000 American wage earners are employed making typewriters and supplies, against 10,000 making ammunition and 5,000 making firearms.

Since typewriting is the modern pen and ammunition and gun the modern sword, the saying that the pen is mightier than the sword, will bear checking up on its industrial side.

Wheat

Price of wheat never would fall below $1.20 a bushel or rise above 1.50 if the grain market were stabilized by a government fund of $100,000,000. So claims Arthur R. Roberts, commission broker, member of the Chicago Board of Trade.

The fund, according to Roberts' suggestion, would be used to buy up grain surplus at seasonal times. It is worth considering. A hundred million dollars, suddenly taking a hand in the situation, should be powerful enough to stabilize any market.

You

Wages are to individuals what dividends are to corporations?

To find your personal value as a strictly business proposition, multiply your income for a year by 16 2-3 The result will be your value, on which you earn 6 per cent a year in the form of wages or salary.

By this process, when you increase your income $1000 a year you have increased your capital, or personal worth, $16,666.67. Which makes it clearer why it is so difficult to raise the old income $1000.

CURRENT EVENTS SIMPLY TOLD FOR LITTLE TOTS

Ships Now Made Dry As Land

Ever since the United States has been DRY as it is rather slangily but very compactly expressed, there has been no question that it was against the law to make liquor, to sell it, to move it about or to bring it into the country from the outside,

But it has not been so certain how the law applied to ships entering and leaving American ports.

Ships belonging to foreign countries were permitted to visit the United States and to sail away with liquor on board, so long as they neither sold nor gave it away while within three miles of the coast, nor attempted to put any of it ashore,

Ships belonging to Americans who bought liquor at foreign ports and were allowed to keep it on board under the same conditions as foreign vessels.

Ships belonging to the U. S. government, and run by the U. S. Shipping Board, at first were forbidden to have liquor on board, but later ethe same rules were applied to them as to the vessels owned by private persons.

Thus, all these ships had bars on board and sold liquors to passengers while away from the United States, being merely required to lock it up while inside what is known as the Three Mile Limit, a strip of ocean three miles wide stretching along the country's coast, and also spoken of as territorial waters of the United States.

Finally it began to be urged that the same law that applied to land ought to apply to American ships.

The duty of enforcing the law in cases like this belongs to the secretary of the treasury, who at this time is Andrew W. Mellon.

Secretary Mellon was not sure what to do, so he asked Harry M. Daugherty, the attorney general, whose business it is to answer legal questions put to him by President Harding or other members of the cabinet.

The attorney general replied that, in his opinion, ships cannot, under any circumstances, bring liquor inside the three mile limit. This rule, he said, applies to the United States, Alaska, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Hawaii and the Philippines.

But foreign ship owners probably will look at the matter differently. The attorney general does not make the law. He only tells how he understands it. It is expected the foreign ship owners will say they think he is mistaken. The chance are that they will ask the United States courts to first stop Secretary Mellon from meddling with their liquor while in American ports so long as they keep it locked up, and then that they will ask the Supreme Court at Washington if it agrees with the attorney general. If the Supreme Court does not agree the foreign ships will continue to do as they have done in the past. If it does agree, they they will have to comply with the law.

However, if foreign ships, finally, are not allowed to bring liquor locked Canadian ports, and American passengers who wish to travel on these ships will have to go by rail to and from these Canadian ports and the United States, in order to take them, or to get home after traveling on them from abroad.

It is quite probable that the matter will become international and that President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes will have to discuss and settle it with foreign governments. There is no question that the United States can do as she sees fit. Still, there is the chance that foreign governments, in return, may make trouble for American ships in their own ports if they are not listened to, so it may be better to reach a friendly agreement.

American Navy Men For Brazil

In Washington some people are very much pleased at news that the republic of Brazil, in South America, has decided to have United States naval officers superintend the building of a much stronger Brazilian navy.

Admiral Carl T. Vogelsang, who has been commandant of the New York navy yard district, is to have charge of this work, and he will have about 20 other American officers to help him.

This is not only a compliment to the United States, but thee American officers undoubtedly will be able thru their influence to have the material for the new ships bought in this country.

At the same time, people who are acquainted with South America, hear the news with a great deal of regret.

The South American countries are very jealous of one another, and if Brazil sets to work to make herself stronger than any of the others, or stronger than all the rest put together it is certain that the rest will try by army and navy preparations of their own, to prevent her from succeeding.

This will mean a race between them for military strength, and such races are very apt to end in fighting.

Brazil has, indeed, a larger population than any of the other South American republics, whih makes her stronger, but any hint, like rapid navy building, that she means to use this strength, may lead to combinations of several other countries against her, and such combinations are always dangerous.

So peace loving people are worried even though Brazil's plans may bring considerable business to American shipyards and armament factories, and give employment to a number of American naval experts.

Near East Peace Talks Progressing

The danger is not over that more important countries will be drawn into the trouble in the Near East, following the defeat of the Greeks by the Turks under Kemal Pasha.

However, the outlook there, just at the moment, is much brighter,

Representatives of the Turks, the Greeks, the England, the French and the Italians have been conferring at the town of Mudania, on the Sea of Marmora, in Asia Minor, and while this conference has been interrupted once or twice, by temporary deadlocks it has been resumed each time and thus far steady progress has been made toward a peaceful settlement.

It seems nearly certain that the Turks will get most of what they demand, Constantinople and Thrace as far as the Maritza River, but that the League of Nations will be given control of navigation through the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora and the Bosporus.

Americans have been doing their utmost to help these unfortunate people. President Harding has given his approval to an appeal by the Red Cross and the Near East Relief to raise money for this purpose, and Will H. Hays, former postmaster general will have charge of the work.

HONEYMOONERS ABROAD

Can Business Be Mixed With The Honeymoon?

BY ZOE BECKLEY

The stentorian blare of the Roma's departing signal and the cry of "All Ashore!" tingled and thrilled through Edna as she looked down on the seemingly moving dock crowded with friends of the passengers. Sudden excited tears blurred her vision. The hand that clutched her new husband's arm tightened convulsively With the other she waved frantically to the dear people come to speed her on her honeymoon, and the homeland she was leaving for the first time in her life.

Jack sensed her excitement to the point of pain. He looked down at the flushed sweet face with its oval of brunet beauty, and brown eyes wet with tears

"To late to go back now, Kits, we're off. Got to put up with just me, old darlint!"

The very effort he made to steady his voice betrayed how keyed-up he was himself. Edna squeezed his arm again, laying her cheek to his sleeve. Then, not to let the world see, she straightened to tiptoe in adieu to those ashore

Faces on the dock grew blurred: you couldn't tell one wildly waving figure from another And now, as the huge Roma swung full into midstream the last slight contact of sight was gone Hand tight in hand, Edna and Jack watched the stately procession of New York's man-made peaks glide past them.

It was all so new and so big to them coming from their homy little mid-west town. They felt awed The great steamer, the great city seeming to watch them with its million brought eyes, the ocean on which they were venturing, the new world to which they were going

Their scanty remarks were almost whispers. The sparkling harbor changed to the gray of the open sea. A chill salt wind sent through them a delicious half-frightened tremor.

"Come on down to the lounge Hon," laughed Jack suddenly. "And say—soon's we pass the three mile limit we're going to quaff a breaker to the greatest business and pleasure trip ever known.

Edna looked up startled.

"Business, Jack?"

He took her by the shoulders and held her off so that she could admire him.

"Brace yourself for one surprise, Mrs. John Edna Duryea,' he said "Behold in this your honorable husband not the humble mid-west district sales manager you thought you married for the rest of your natural life, but a gent with a mission. You are off on a honeymoon, madam paid for by the American Electric Supplies Corp., that your husband may perform an exceedingly delicate and confidential business affair while honeymooning with his charming bride."

LOVE WOES? THEY MAKE HIM RICH

Mrs. Lillian Hildreth, 16-year-old bride whose charge caused arrest of Harry Y. Cohen (right) and (inset) "The Crystal Eye," said to have figured in Cohen's occult rites.

By JACK JUNGMEYER

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 14.—What makes the feminine heart and mind so susceptible to the sway of the self-proclaimed mystic?

A thousand women, patrons of Harry X. Cohen, professionally known as the "Rev." Charles Newman, alleged love cult medium, are today asking themselves this question as he faces grave charges.

Following his arrest on charges of improper conduct toward Mrs. Lillian Hildreth 16-year-old bride client, in his sanctum, the thousand women discovered their names entered in Cohen's cryptically annotated register.

This book, said by authorities to hint at intimate domestic secrets, and bearing on the accused medium's practice, is now court evidence. Its entries run the social scale of Los Angeles and surrounding towns The disillusioned clientele await its possible use after Cohen's arraignment.

"Women generally believe there are certain life and love mysteries which they cannot of themselves fathom," says "The Man Who Knows All," as Cohen styles himself.

"They believe that some wiser son of Adam or daughter of Eve knows the key to these puzzling things. That love can be won and retained by some hocus-pocus That something outside themselves weaves their fate. That's the secret of the mystic influence and success."

The accused "spiritualistic pastor" vehemently denies guilt of the charges made by Mrs. Hildreth who says she was subject to indignities while consulting Cohen He ascribes his predicament to professional jealousy of other mediums.

Short, dark, pudgy, living in a palatial residence and maintaining an office fitted with objects usually identified with mysticism, Cohen says he has practiced successfully in many cities, naming New York, Chicago, and Lincoln, Neb. About his business, as he characterizes it, he was quite frank.

"There's usually something wrong with a woman ... gins visiting mediums," he continued. 'They go to seers to confirm or refute their own suspicions.

'Practically all women patrons ask me, 'Is my husband true to me?'

'Do you suppose I or any other wise medium answers 'No?' That would never do I immediately propound the counter question, 'Are you true to him?' When they almost shriek 'Yes,' then I reply, Well, he's true to you, too You're a couple of fools Go home and b happy."

"My system is to outguess them and evade their questions—a battle of wits, and perfectly legitimate

Newman, or Cohen, is said to have grown wealthy from a few month's practice in Los Angeles.

AN OLD RECIP... TO DARKE...ELL ...P

Sage Tea and Sulp... Gray, Faded Hai...

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

HERE ARE SECRETS OF CAKE BAKING

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
of Columbia University

Everyone likes good cake, and many are the inquiries as to method of making such cake The method of putting together the ingredients is important but the baking is almost as much so, if the result is to be perfect.

The remark was made to me not long ago that cake at the present time costs much less than in the days of our grandmothers even though the price of food materials is greatly increased.

But when a really fine cake is made today the same good materials go into it—eggs, butter, sugar and flour. So many cooks make a cake which is quickly put together, and calls for less material, but they frost it and put it in layers with filling and the final cast is quite as much as the cake calling for more material in itself.

Much experimental work has been and is being done to prove the best method of putting together the ingredients in a cake. If it is to be eaten immediately a cake may be stirred up, very quickly, but for keeping the quality, fine texture and good flavor a more careful mixing is necessary.

A few rules to follow are important. Always have all the materials ready on the table before beginning work Have the oven in good condition. Have pans carefully buttered or greased.

Butter should be melted over hot water and allowed to stand until the sediment has formed. Use oil for greasing pan. It is best applied to the pan with a soft piece of paper or brush

If the cake is to be baked in a pan not over three inches deep it is well to flour it after greasing Be careful every bit of flour is shaken out. For a loaf cake, the best results are obtained when the pan is lined with paper.

Having pans ready and oven at your control proceed to mix the cake. If it is a butter cake, cream or work the butter and sugar together until creamy. If eggs are not separated beat well and add to butter and sugar.

If the yolks and whites are beaten separately add the well-beaten yolks to the creamed butter and sugar—reserving the whites to be beaten stiffly and added to the last, after flour is in.

The cake gets a more thorough beating if the milk and flour are added alternately. After all the ingredients are in give the cake a good beating

It is possible to make a satisfactory cake by putting all the materials together in a bowl and then beating five or more minutes, but the grain of the cake is coarse.

In making a cake where only the yokes are used, or a sponge cake, the eggs need a very thorough beating.

A genuine sponge cake has no leavening material except the eggs, but some of the best sponge cakes have baking powder or soda and cream of tartar in them.

There are still cooks who think baking powder not as good for cake as soda and cream of tartar. The tendency is to use too much baking powder and the cake dries very quickly.

The time for baking cake depends of course on the size and depth of the cake and the heat should increase as the size of the cake decreases. Layer cakes and small individual cakes require a quick oven to send them up then a lower heat to finish baking.

A very satisfactory way of baking a cake is to divide the time for baking into quarters. In the first quarter of the time the cake should rise but not brown; if it begins to brown in that time reduce the heat at once

During the second quarter of the time the cake continues to rise and take on color.

During the third part of the time it bakes without any particular change. This is the critical time, as any sudden change in heat is likely to cause a slight falling in the center of the cake.

The last quarter of the time is to finish the baking and the cake shrinks from the sides of the pan.

Do not hurry a cake in removing from pan. Allow it to cool and settle and usually it will come out without breaking. If it is to be eaten as soon as cool, and if it is to be frosted, do not remove at all from pan. The frosting will not run over the sides, and it can be cut and served from the pan.

One good reliable recipe for a butter cake, and one equally reliable for a sponge cake, are all a housewife needs. She can they vary the butter cake by frosting adding fruits and nuts and spices and by baking in small tins or layers. Sponge cage is best not frosted.

Sometimes," she said, "the forest seems like a trap that I can't escape.
Sometimes I hate it."

"Are you lonely, Eve?"

'As you are. You see I know what the outside world is. I miss it."

"You were in boarding school and college?"

"Yes."

"It must be hard for you here at Star Pond."

The girl sighed unconsciously:

'There are days when I—can scarcely—stand it. . . . The wilderness would be more endurable if dad and I were alone. . . . But even then —"

"You need young people of your own age—educated companions —"

"I need the city Mr. Stormont. I need all it can give: I'm starving for it That's all."

She turned on her pillow, and he saw that she was smiling faintly. Her face bore no trace of the tragic truth she had uttered. But the tragedy was plain enough to him, even without her passionless words of revolt. The situation of this young, educated girl aglow with youth, fettered body and mind to the squalor of the Clinch dump, was perfectly plain to see.

She said, seeing his troubled expression: 'I'm sorry I spoke that way."

"I knew how you must feel, anyway."

"It seems ungrateful," she murmured. "I love my stepfather."

'You've proven that," he replied with a dry humor that brought the hot flush to her face again.

"I must have been crazy that day," she said. "It scares me to remember what I tried to do. What a very frightful thing—if I had killed you. How can you forgive me?"

"How can you forgive me, Eve?"

She turned her head: "I do"

"Entirely?"

"Yes."

He said, a slight emotion noticeable in his voice: "Well, I forgave you before the darned gun exploded in your hands."

"How could you?" she protested.

"I was thinking all the while that you were acting as I'd have acted if anything threatened my father."

"Were you thinking of that?"

"Yes, and also how to get hold of you before you shot me." He began to laugh.

After a moment she turned her head to look at him, and her smile glimmered, responsive to his amusement. But she shivered slightly, too.

"How about that egg?" he inquired.

"I can get up—"

"Better keep on your feet What is there in the pantry? You must be starved."

'I could eat a little before supper time," she admitted. "I forgot to take my lunch with me this morning. It is still there in the pantry on the bread box wrapped up in brown paper just as I left it."

She half rose in bed, supported on one arm, her curly brown-gold hair framing her face:

"Two cakes of sugar-milk chocolate in a flat brown packet tied with a string," she explained, smiling at his amusement.

So he went down to the pantry and discovered the parcel on the bread box where she had left it that morning before starting for the cache on Owl Marsh.

He brought it to her, placed both pillows upright behind her, stepped back gaily to admire the effect Eve, with her parcel in her hands, laughed shyly at his comedy.

"Begin on your chocolate," he said "I'm going back to fix you up some bread and butter and a cup of tea."

When again he had disappeared, the girl, still smiling, began to untie her packet, hurriedly, slowly loosening string and wrapping.

Her attention was not fixed on what her slender fingers were about.

She drew from a parcel a flat morocco case with a coat of arms and crest stamped on it in gold, black and scarlet.

For a few minutes she stared at the object stupidly. The next moment she heard Stormont's spurred tread on the stairs; and she thrust the morocco case and the wrapping under the pillows behind her

She looked up at him in a dazed way when he came in with the tea and bread. He sat the tin tray on her bureau and came over to the bedside.

"Eve," he said, "you look very white and ill. Have you been hurt somewhere and haven't you admitted it?"

She seemed unable to speak, and he took both her hands and looked anxiously into the lovely, pallid features.

After a moment she turned her head and buried her face in the pillow, trembling now in overwhelming realization of what she had endured for the sake of two cakes o sugar - milk chocolate hidden under a bush in the forest.

For a long while the girl lay there, feverish flush of tears on her partly hidden face, her nervous hands tremulous, restless, now seeking his convulsively, now striving to escape his clasp—eloquent uncertain little hands that seemed to tell so much and yet were telling him nothing he could understand.

"Eve, dear", he said. 'Are you in pain? What is it that has happened to you? I thought you were all right. You seemed all right—"

"I am," she said in a smothered voice. "You'll stay here with me, won't you?"

"Of course I will. It's just the reaction. It's all over. You're relaxing. That's all dear. You're safe Nothing can harm you now—"

"Please don't leave me."

In the tense silnce that followed her trembling ceased. Then his heart heavy irregular, began beating so that the startled pulses in her body awoke, wildly responsive.

Deep emotions, new, unfamiliar, were stirring, awaking, confusing them both. In a sudden instinct to escape she turned and partly rose on one elbow, gazing blindly about her out of tear-marred eyes.

"I want my room to myself," she murmured in a breathless sort of way "—I want you to get out, please—"

A boyish flush burnt his face He got up slowly took his rifle from the corner and went out closing the door and seated himself on the stairs.

And there, on guard sat Stormont, rigid, unstirring hour after hour, facing the first great passion of his life, and stunned by the impact of its swift and unexpected blow.

In her chamber on the bed's edge, sat Eve Strayer, her deep eyes fixed on space. Vague emotions, exquisitely recurrent, new born possessed her. The whole world, too all around her seemed golden and all pulsating with a faint, still rhythm that indefinably thrilled her pulses to response.

Passion, full-armed springs flaming from the heart of man. Woman is slow to burn. And it was the delicate phantom of passion that Eve gazed upon, there in her unpainted chamber, her sun-tanned fingers linked listlessly in her lap, her little feet like bruised white flowers drooping above the floor.

Hour after hour she sat there dreaming, staring at the tinted ghost of Eros, rose-hued near smiling, unreal, impalpable as the dusty sunbeam that slanted from her window, gliding the boarded floor.

Three specters, gliding near, paused to gaze at State Trooper Stormont, on guard by the stairs. Then they looked at the closed door of Eve's chamber

Then the three specters Fate, Chance and Destiny, whispering together, passed on toward the depths of the sunset forest.

DODGE BROTHERS
BUSINESS COUPE

With this coupe Dodge Brothers have proved once for all that a closed car can be as sturdy and practically as inexpensive as an open roadster.

This is largely due to the all-steel body—the first ever marketed—which admits of lower cost of manufacture through standardized machine production. Unlike wood, the steel surface will take a finish of enamel, baked on at high temperature. This process results in a permanent lustre, and eliminates the trouble and expense of repainting.

The wide straight seat is upholstered in genuine Spanish blue leather, durable and readily cleaned.

TRIFLING TRAVELOGS

Philadelphia Ancient and Historic. Is a One Way Town

By W. H. Porterfield

Philadelphia, which lies two hours south of New York, contests with Boston the honor of being first in historic interest among American cities. Philadelphians will not even argue this point. And neither will Bostonians.

Myself, I give the palm to Boston but at the some time frankly confess that I get the greatest single thrill over a visit to that most historic of all American shrines, Independence Hall, at Second and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia.

This, third city of our country, was laid out before the trolley car and automobile were dreamed of and aside from Market, which runs down to the Delaware, it sure is a one way town. You may recall that old poem of our school days which told of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and the line—"the quiet street of Chestnut was all turbulent with the sound?"

Well, that's the chronic condition of Chestnut street today. There is one thing about it, however, your program is all laid out when you leave your hotel. You simply step into the endless procession and keep going, you can't turn back if you value life, property or sacred honor.

The trolley cars run one way only, down and across and as for taxies and trucks, they don't run, they simply crawl and stall.

It's easier to ship in Philadelphia than in any city of America except possibly Chicago because the big stores are all together and admirably arranged. That's one thing to be said for this man's town and another is that the few first-class hotels are also bunched. You can sometimes get a room in one of these if you have written or wired ahead. Otherwise, not, for Philadelphia is underhoteled, if you know what I mean.

Philadelphia is an enormous town, its present area dating back to 1854 when a big flock of boroughs, townships and districts were merged and divided into 47 wards.

It covers an area of 129 square miles, the city proper, and contains about 2,000,000 people, and there are easily another million in the immediate suiburbs. So you see this is quite some village, taking it by and large.

Philadelphia was laid out by William Penn, whose statue adorns the lofty tower of the municipal building, right in the heart of the city. I have been visiting Philadelphia for 19 years now, quite regularly, and I always get a kick out of getting lost in that Muny building.

It bestrides four street corners like a colossus and once you're inside it's a job to find your way out, at least for me it is.

The trolley cars of Philadelphia, too, give one quite a kick, that is, time is no object.

They ramble along the narrow little alleys called streets, over hills and under viaducts, finally reaching your destination, if you have made the right transfers

In the old days, Philadelphia had the highest street car fare in the country, 8 cents for exchange tickets good on any lines. Now the rate is 7 cents or four for a quarter for regular tickets on surface lines of the subway, or 10 cents for exchange tickets, good for any transfer point.

Philadelphians are very proud of the fact that 350,000 buildings within her borders, 215,000 are dwellings.

The city is well provided with little parks or snares, 56 of them all told, besides fairly well euipped playgrounds for children.

As the third manufacturing city of the country, Philadelphia turns out close to $800,000,000 worth of products annually from its 16,000 separate factories, wherein are employed 20,000 wage earners.

There are a good many advanced thinkers in Philadelphia, and among these a generation ago, was the famous manufacturer of Fels Naphtha soap, the great single tax advocate, Samuel Fels, whose labors in the cause of his employes and the worker generally, were altrustic and intelligent, and who died beloved the most by those who knew him best

Big College No Longer Supreme in Football

By Bo McMillin
(All-American Quarterback)

Centre College at Danville, Kentucky, is perhaps the most talked of small college in the country.

Football put Centre College on the map.

Five years ago only a select few knew there was such an institution. Today it is mentioned as frequently as Harvard, Yale or Princeton.

Centre College broke into big print four years ago when it decisively defeated the University of West Virginia. Earlier in the year West Virginia had surprised the football world by its defeat of Princeton, one of the strongest teams that ever represented the Orange and Black.

Last fall Centre put over the big thrill of the season by its 6 to 0 defeat of Harvard.

Centre's rise to fame in the football world has been typical of the success that a great many small colleges have enjoyed in recent years.

The new football featuring the forward pass has helped to pave the way for the smaller colleges. No longer is there such a premium on beef and reserves.

Spee ds the keynote of the new game. It calls for fast, well conditioned players. Strategy supplants brawn.

However, if you go back into the history of the sensational rise of most of the smaller colleges you will find there is some leading spirit who has done much to put them over.

A good illustration of this can be given through the recent success of my alma mater. The man behind it all there was Robert L. Myers, a Centre alumnus. Many have the impression that this team just happened or built itself, but such is not true.

In 1916 Myers took it upon himself to encourage a few students from his home town high school to go with him to Centre, where he had voluntarily offered his services as coach without compensation.

Among this crowd were several All-State high school men and others who later made All-American and All-Southern elections before leaving college. The man working at this had visions of a great football team at Centre College and through his wonderful personality and untiring efforts a great organization was perfected.

One of the biggest factors on a successful football team is the feeling and relation of the players among themselves. In this Meyers stressed special attention. The men played and fought as a band of brothers. There was not a man on the team who would not go through fire for his college or coach.

This is something that is usually lacking at the large institutions. At a small college the players are grouped in a few small buildings. Every man knows every other man on the campus. There is a feeling of fellowship among the students. At all college activities these men are being constantly thrown together Their relationship is in common.

At the large schools a football team is like some mechanical device. There is never the fight and the spirit as shown where all the men know each other and are like one big family.

The high school athlete is beginning to recognize the advantages of the smaller institutions and in this way better material is being found there.

These same smaller schools are realizing the advantages of good clean athletics to the growing boy and are securing more capable men as coaches.

I believe it is due to these reasons more than to the change in the rules favoring the open style of play that is bringing the small institutions in a position to compete with the larger ones on the football field.

Yellow and Silver

Silver lace is effectively combined with yellow lace in a stunning negligee that has a satin overbodice and a straight lace tunic and many graceful wing draperies

Large Square Collar

The very wide square collar is seen competing with the large, round Bertha. Since this has the tendency to give a wide shoulder line it is recommended only for the slender girl

Overblouses

Smart overblouses for fall are cut like middies with corded cuff hems and monograms worked in silk to match the skirt with which the blouse is worn

Mustapha Kemal Pasha Entertains

SPORT OF ALL SORT

Boston was shut out more often than any other team in the American League last season. The Red Sox suffered a whitewash on 16 occasions Detroit was the hardest team to shut out ,being blanked only 5 times.

No player in the American League succeeded in making six hits in one game last year. The feat of making five hits in a game was accomplished 10 times Ty Cobb on three occasions made five hits. Gosling, the recruit fielder of the Washington team, turned the trick twice, while Rice, Witt, Baker, Gardner and Rigney each had one big day.

Detroit and St. Louis played the longest game in the American League last year, battling sixteen innings before the Browns got the decision, In this game Shocker, the star pitcher of the Browns was put out of the game by the umpire in the 14th inning, and the recruit Pruett took his place and got credit for the victory.

The season of 1922 established more firmly than ever before the supremacy of the American Tennis players. More international stars invaded this country than ever before and all of them were turned back. The United States is not only first in tennis but she has no serious rival.

"Stuffy" McInnis of the Cleveland team wants to take up college coaching after he retires from the big league. Recently it was reported from New Haven that McInnis would be tendered the position as Yale coach. The reappointment of Tommers, however killed such a rumor

In New York, the city of opportunity, a watch is pawned every 45 seconds.

Oldham county had 2,194 horses and 1,870 mules in 1920.
